ROYAL FUSS

Westminster Abbey

Everything you ever wanted to know about William and Kate's wedding site, Westminster Abbey

Mark your calendars, royalty watchers. The marriage of Prince William and Kate Middleton has been announced for April 29! Here are a few facts about Westminster Abbey in London, where the ceremony will take place. REUTERS

1 The Abbey became a popular venue for royal weddings when Princess Patricia of Connaught chose it for her marriage to the Honorable Alexander Ramsay in 1919. It was the first time in 650 years that the Abbey had been used for a royal wedding.

2 Although St. Paul's Cathedral was the venue for the wedding of Prince Charles to Lady Diana Spencer in 1981, Westminster Abbey was the venue for the funeral service of Diana in September 1997, just days after she was killed in a car crash in Paris.

3 Around 960 A.D., Dunstan, Bishop of London, established a group of Benedictine monks on "Thorney Island," an isolated marshy area of land on the banks of the River Thames.

4 Edward the Confessor built a new church on the site, which was consecrated in 1065. Edward died a few days after the consecration, was buried in the Abbey and later made a saint.

Middleton and William
REUTERS

5 Henry III pulled down the whole church in 1245 (except the nave) and replaced it with the present Abbey in the pointed Gothic style of the period.

6 Since William the Conqueror, every English sovereign has been crowned in the Abbey with the exception of Edward V and every British sovereign since the union of the English and Scottish Crowns in 1603, with the exception of Edward VIII.

7 Edward V was deposed and probably murdered by his uncle, Richard III. Edward VIII abdicated to marry American divorcee Wallis Simpson. Many kings and queens are buried near the shrine of Edward the Confessor or in Henry VII's chapel.

8 The last sovereign to be buried in the Abbey was George II (died 1760); since then they have been buried at Windsor Castle.

9 The Abbey is crowded with the tombs and memorials of famous British subjects, including Isaac Newton, David Livingstone and Ernest Rutherford.

10 Part of the south transept (or wing) is known as Poets' Corner and includes the tombs of Geoffrey Chaucer, Ben Jonson (who was buried upright), John Dryden, Robert Browning and many others.

Strip-a-thon? A great cause

Traditionally when you think of fundraisers, you think of bake sales, auctions or boring $100-a-plate dinners with stuffy people in stuffy rooms that require you to stop for pizza on the way home because all you got to eat was one soft-shell crab with asparagus foam and bacon-wrapped bacon.

Well, leave it to the gay community to come up with a creative and sexy way to raise money for a cause: an online strip-a-thon!

TPAN, the Test Positive Aware Network, a nonprofit group that empowers people living with HIV through a variety of support services and advocacy, is holding its third annual Bar-lesque competition through the end of the month. The hook: Visit a gallery of 13 local guys at bar-lesque.org and vote—with your wallet—for the one you think is the hottest. The more money he raises, the more naked he gets. (I've already pumped some money into the site and have gone to a Bar-lesque party at Spin trying to get the guys to drop trou. I won't tell you whom I have donated money to, but I will say he has facial hair and tattoos and is HOT.)

When I mentioned this fundraiser to a straight couple, they were impressed by its creativity.

"That's way more exciting than Girl Scout cookies," Jen said.

When Jen's boyfriend, Kristian, saw her interest in a male strip-a-thon, he cried double-standard. Not for the bar-lesque.org event, but because he noted that if he went to a strip bar and put dollars in a dancer's G-string his girlfriend would not be happy.

This evolved into a debate about how the gay community is more accepting or forgiving of using sex to drum up business. It's not uncommon to go to a gay bar in any city and see shirtless bartenders, go-go boys dancing on a stage or sexy videos playing in the TV screens. In fact, I'm disappointed if I go to bar and they don't have at least one of these things. It's part of the culture of the community, and gay couples usually don't get upset if one partner puts dollars down a dancer's skivvies while the other looks on.

Compare that with the male half of a straight couple going to the Admiral and flirting with a stripper. That usually doesn't go over so well. Hell, I know girls who won't even let their men go to Hooters because of irrational jealousy—and those Hooters girls wear like three pairs of pantyhose under their shorts. That's not hot.

Men are men, and we like to be visually stimulated. So if a bar wants to have waitresses in tiny tilted kilts or buff shirtless bartenders in order to drum up business, it should.

And if a not-for-profit wants to tap into that consumer demand as well and feature a site in which the guys' clothes go down the more their donations go up, then I will max out my credit card. Besides, it's all for a good cause!

Sandwich politics

Quinn, Brady break bread at Chicago deli

Chicago Tribune

There was no beer but plenty of beef Tuesday as Democratic Gov. Quinn and Republican challenger Bill Brady sought to bury the hatchet over sandwiches at a popular Chicago deli.

The lunch date came three weeks after Quinn squeaked out a 20,000-vote victory in a contentious campaign for governor marked by personal and political attacks.

The meeting was modeled after a sit-down over beers at the Billy Goat Tavern by Republican U.S. Sen.-elect Mark Kirk and Democratic challenger Alexi Giannoulias.

"I think the great thing about our country and definitely our state is you can have a robust contest for elected office, but when the election's over ... people can still be civil and decent," Quinn said afterward.

While the rivals exchanged pleasantries over mammoth corned beef sandwiches and potato pancakes, they didn't put aside all their differences—namely whether Illinois needs an income tax increase to help solve the state's worsening budget problem.

"The governor and I have agreed to disagree," Brady said. "I continue to believe that we over-tax Illinois businesses and families. He believes there is room within Illinois' economy for a tax increase."

Brady said he doesn't think there's an appetite among lawmakers for a tax hike, though the state senator didn't leave hungry.

"It was a nice conversation," Brady said. "It was particularly nice that he bought lunch."

Quinn, known for his thrift, held the yellow receipt aloft as proof.

“The governor and I have agreed to disagree. I continue to believe that we over-tax Illinois businesses and families. He believes there is room within Illinois' economy for a tax increase.”

— Bill Brady

Behind Goose Island's $45 brew

Chicago Tribune

Go ahead and get the double take out of the way: The beer that Goose Island is releasing Friday costs nearly $45 a bottle. Yes, you read right. Close to $45. Per bottle. Good thing it's a 22-ounce bottle.

Eagerly anticipated by beer geeks for months, Rare Bourbon County Brand Stout will be available at 9 a.m. at Binny's Lincoln Park location in bottles and on draft at 10 a.m. at the Goose Island Brew Pub on Clybourn Avenue. Those are the only two places you'll find it through the weekend; next Monday, it will be on liquor store shelves throughout the city.

But probably not for long. Most observers expect all 940 cases—more than 11,000 bottles that will be sent to Goose's 18-state distribution network—to be sold within a couple of weeks. Binny's beer manager Adam Vavrick said customers have been asking about the beer for eight months.

"I don't it anticipate it will last more than that day," Vavrick said.

So what exactly is BCS Rare (as the Goose folks call it)? The Rare is simply an aged version of the already widely-available Bourbon County Brand Stout. Two things make this version different: It has been aged for two years (nearly three times as long as the regular stuff) and in barrels that previously spent 23 years aging Pappy Van Winkle's bourbon (a significant upgrade from the Heaven Hill barrels Goose usually uses).

It makes for a profoundly dark and rich beer with 25 years of booze-making behind it.

"These barrels started life in 1985," Goose Island brew master Greg Hall said. "It's funny to think what we were doing in 1985. Reagan was starting his second term. The Bears won the Super Bowl. I was a freshman at Iowa. And it was three years before Goose Island opened."

Police search for clues in officer's death

Chicago Tribune

Even at 45, David Blake was a neighborhood kid to the Beverly residents who watched him grow from a quiet youth who loved playing football into a member of an elite Chicago police unit.

On Tuesday, residents and friends mourned Blake's death as his police colleagues tried to figure out what happened on the quiet, dead-end street where the 15-year veteran was killed Monday night while off-duty.

Blake was found fatally shot Monday evening inside his SUV, a cigarette still dangling from his mouth, sources said. The vehicle was parked in the 2900 block of West Seipp Street in Ashburn, nearly three miles from his boyhood home in Beverly and about four miles from his current residence.

Police were called to the block after several residents heard a volley of shots.

Blake had been shot multiple times, according to the Cook County medical examiner's office. He was believed to have been shot from inside the vehicle, sources said; all its windows were rolled up. Blake's wallet and service weapon also were recovered, leading investigators to think robbery was unlikely.

It was not immediately clear why Blake was targeted or why he was even on the block.

Police were saying little about the investigation Tuesday beyond a statement from Superintendent Jody Weis in the morning.

"We've done this too many times this year, and it's with a great deal of sadness that once again I stand before you announcing the death of a Chicago police officer," Weis said.

Blake was the fourth officer to be fatally shot while off-duty since May. A fifth officer was killed in a car crash while responding to a burglary call in February.

Chico gets a boost in campaign for mayor

And Davis questions Emanuel residency

Chicago Tribune

Gery Chico's mayoral campaign got some help Tuesday when he got the backing of Paul Vallas, his onetime partner in revamping Chicago Public Schools.

Standing outside the Orozco School in Pilsen, a school built when the duo ran the city's school system, Vallas said Chico is most prepared to tackle the tough job of mayor.

"This election has got to be about who is ready from Day 1 to run this city," Vallas said. "There is no one more familiar with this city, its neighborhoods, its city council, its government, its politics, its issues, than Gery Chico."

Several blocks west, mayoral candidate U.S. Rep. Danny Davis said opponent Rahm Emanuel does not fit the residency requirements to run for Chicago mayor because until recently he worked as President Obama's White House chief of staff in Washington.

"Based upon what I have read, I have not seen anything that would suggest to me that he meets the requirements of the law," Davis said. The law requires candidates to have lived in Chicago for a year before the Feb. 22 election.

Emanuel insists he qualifies, in part, because he still owns a home in the city.

Man killed trying to stop robbery

Chicago Tribune

A man was shot to death as he tried to help a woman being robbed of her purse on the West Side on Monday evening, police say.

Bobby Butler, 55, was shot in the abdomen just before 6 p.m. Monday in Lawndale and was pronounced dead at 7:55 p.m., according to the Cook County medical examiner's office.

Officials had identified the victim as Bobbie Butler, but public records indicate he went by "Bobby."

Butler had come to the aid of a 26-year-old woman who was being robbed at gunpoint in the 2100 block of South Millard Avenue, according to Chicago Police

News Affairs Officer Daniel O'Brien.

A Fire Department spokesman said Butler was taken to the hospital from the 1800 block of South Drake Avenue.

The woman had walked from a nearby "L" stop to her car and was about to get in when she was confronted by a man about 25-30 years old who threatened her with a gun, according to a police report.

Butler saw what was going on, came up to the robber, tried to stop him and was shot, according to the report.

The robber ran away.

The woman was unharmed, according to police.

White House condemns attack on South Korea

6 WASHINGTON The U.S. urged restraint Tuesday following a North Korean artillery attack on South Korea and vowed to forge a "measured and unified" response with major powers, including China.

North Korea fired several dozen artillery shells at a South Korean island in one of the heaviest bombardments of the South since the Korean War ended in 1953, sharply increasing tensions on the divided peninsula.

South Korea warned North Korea of "enormous retaliation" if it took more aggressive steps. But the U.S., which has about 28,000 troops stationed in South Korea, played down the chances of any immediate U.S. military action to deter the reclusive state.

Defense Secretary Robert Gates and South Korean Defense Minister Kim Tae-young agreed to coordinate any response to the North Korean action, the Pentagon said, adding that Gates expressed his appreciation for the "restraint shown to date."

The U.S. labeled the attack a violation of the armistice agreement that ended the 1950-53 Korean War, as it did North Korea's March attack on a South Korean warship that killed 46 South Korean sailors.

But State Department spokesman Mark Toner said the U.S. was seeking a unified diplomatic front with North Korea's neighbors, including China, Pyongyang's sole remaining major backer, which has in the past resisted international efforts to get tough with its isolated ally.

"We're going to take a measured and unified approach," said Toner, adding, "We're not going to respond willy nilly."

The White House condemned the attack. President Obama was awoken at 3:55 a.m. for an emergency briefing and was outraged over the strike, the White House said. He was due to speak with South Korean President Lee Myung-bak, White House spokesman Bill Burton said.

1 What are your Thanksgiving sports traditions?	Ho-Flo Turkey Bowl, baby! All my out-of-shape people say "Hooooooooo!"	I throw things at the TV while screaming about the Lions having the Thanksgiving contract.	A turkey bowl, a pie bowl, sleep bowl, leftover bowl, Pepto bowl.	Playing football in the backyard with my family before dinner. And does a game of Scattergories count?	Turkey and football with family, which is better than how Tiger Woods spent his Thanksgiving last year.
2 What's your favorite memory of Thanksgiving NFL games?	Wondering every year why the NFL thinks we want to see Detroit play.	The lowly Lions beating Favre and the Pack in 2003. It still gives me warm fuzzies.	NFL? My older brothers always played the No Food Left game with me.	Tryptophan has made me sleepy every year, but I couldn't see past the table full of food anyway.	John Madden awarding the turducken to the "players of the game." Good thing they weren't counting calories!
3 If you're the Bulls or Blackhawks, how do you celebrate Thanksgiving on the road?	Having some turkey instead of playing like one?	Do they have Boston Market on the West Coast?	Bulls: Gobble up rebounds. Blackhawks: Leave no leftovers in front of the net.	Meet, with costumes and Cup in tow, and have dinner Pilgrims-and-Indians-style.	The Blackhawks are taking the Stanley Cup and eating Thanksgiving dinner out of it.
4 Who is your sports turkey of the year?	Same as every year: The University of Florida. All of them. Go 'Noles.	LeBron James, for managing to ruin his reputation in one ill-advised ESPN special.	Brett Favre. Looks like he was done last year. Now he's dry and overcooked.	Brett Favre. Too much drama and not enough athletic accomplishments this season.	LeBron James. Giving 700 turkeys to your hometown this Thanksgiving doesn't make you the "King" again.
5 How are Chicago sports like Black Friday?	Everything is really overhyped, and we end up with nothing to show for it.	Millions of desperate, angry people shoving each other—I think it's obvious.	We think the hot item is in the bag, yet we always lose out.	Both start early in the morning and end with participants passed out—for different reasons, of course.	There will be some good running, blocking and tackling on the field—and at your local Wal-Mart.

Hawks still trippin'

Second half of road swing begins with Western Conference finals rematch

SAN JOSE, Calif. With Western Canada a fading memory and Las Vegas more of a fuzzy one, the Blackhawks are set to kick off the second half of their circus trip.

The first three games were a roller coaster as the Hawks sandwiched two dominating performances around a dreadful one. After bonding in Sin City (everyone made it to San Jose in one piece, by the way), dates against the Sharks, Anaheim and L.A. loom beginning Wednesday night in San Jose in a rematch between Western Conference finals foes from a season ago.

During the U.S. portion of the odyssey, the Hawks will continue their search for consistency that has eluded them this season. They hammered the Oilers and Canucks 12-1 combined, but the Flames thrashed them 7-2.

HAWKS SCORE IN ALL-STAR VOTING

The Blackhawks are faring well during the first week of voting in the 2011 NHL All-Star Game fan balloting.

Defenseman Duncan Keith is second in the voting with 82,968, trailing only Penguins captain Sidney Crosby's 118,755. Jonathan Toews (right) is fifth with 79,953, behind the Red Wings' Nicklas Lidstrom (80,723) and the Capitals' Alex Ovechkin at 80,169.

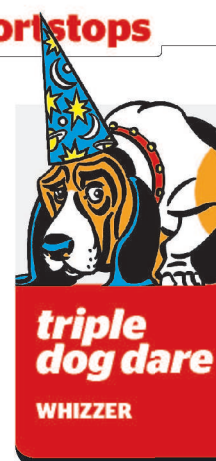

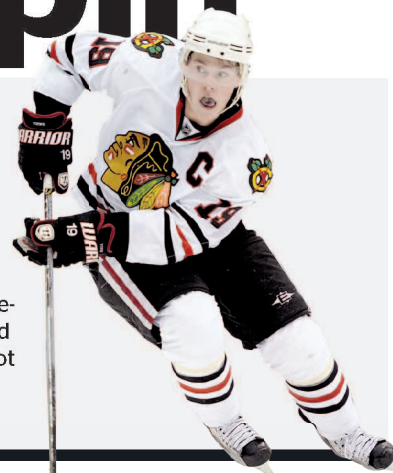

The Hawks lead the league with nine players among the top vote-getters. Patrick Kane is fifth among forwards with 63,969 votes and Marian Hossa is eighth with 57,324. Patrick Sharp is not on the ballot but has drawn 23,522 write-in votes.

Among defensemen, Brent Seabrook is seventh with 54,419.

"Every game was different," Hawks coach Joel Quenneville said Tuesday after practice at HP Pavilion. "We were very happy with the way we started and very happy the way it ended and very disappointed in the middle. The way we played in Vancouver [on Saturday] is something we want to get right back. That has to be our mindset and that has got to be our standard."

The first half of the trip netted the Hawks four of a possible six points and served as a learning experience.

"You can't take any game for granted," forward Patrick Sharp said. "I'm really proud of the group the way we battled back and had a great response in Vancouver. We can learn you can't look too far ahead and you have to focus on the game at hand. That starts [against the Sharks]."

IN IT TO WIN IT

Experienced Black Wednesday partiers hit the bars without getting hit with hangovers

By Leonor Vivanco

REDEYE

You know the drill. No work on Thanksgiving, so you might as well booze it up the night before, right?

Much like Black Friday, when shoppers rush to stores, Chicago bargoers flock to their neighborhood hangouts on Black Wednesday to reunite, catch up and drink with friends who are in town for the holiday. It's a mini-reunion of sorts.

But make no mistake. Black Wednesday isn't for amateurs—and it takes know-how to make it through the night without completely derailing your plans for the next day with a hangover.

The Wednesday before Thanksgiving ranks among the top unofficial drinking holidays with bar crawls and drink specials galore from the Turkey Trolley Trot at six Lakeview bars to Wild Turkey Thanksgiving Eve at O'Donovans in North Center, among others.

Expert drinkers know how to survive a long night of boozing without being a buzz kill during the drinking holiday or feeling too horrible on Thanksgiving.

"It is a rare opportunity to get to go out on a Wednesday night. I think it's a lot of fun to go out during the week, but you often pay the price at work," said Rob Popowcer, 31, who lives in River North.

He doesn't go out much during the week but makes an exception on Black Wednesday.

"Now, you can just enjoy the hangover over some turkey, mashed potatoes and green bean casserole."

Thanksgiving Eve partiers usually aren't allowed to sleep off their hangovers. Instead they're forced to be semi-awake, shuttling to relatives' homes and helping in the kitchen with the Thanksgiving feast.

In order to be on the top of their game Thursday, Wednesday partiers follow certain guidelines.

Noah Pinzur learned his lesson six years ago when he had an atomic hangover on Thanksgiving. He broke up with his girlfriend on Black Wednesday and partied

Where does Black Wednesday rank?

By Leonor Vivanco

REDEYE

Black Wednesday has emerged as a big night out across Chicago. But it hasn't reached the title of top unofficial drinking holiday.

"St. Party's Day is king in Chicago. Nothing beats that," said Durkin's general manager Joe Magoonaugh, drawing on his experience working at Chicago bars.

"After that, as far as drinking holidays, my preference I would say New Year's would be next and then Halloween and then Black Wednesday after that." Other biggies are Cinco de Mayo and Fat Tuesday.

But Black Wednesday is more chill than the others, said Violeta Koleva, office manager for the Four Corners Tavern Group, which owns eight bars including Schoolyard Tavern and West End. In the past few years, Koleva said, more people have headed to neighborhood bars to celebrate the holiday with cocktails.

"A lot of young people leave town early on Wednesday and the ones that stay in town definitely will go out to celebrate the eve of Thanksgiving, but they want it to be easy, [relaxed] and unpretentious," she said in an e-mail.

"It is a rare opportunity to get to go out on a Wednesday night. I think it's a lot of fun to go out during the week, but you often pay the price at work."

hard. He downed Captain Morgan and Diet Cokes all night. And his body hated him for it. He got so sick that he popped blood vessels in his eyes, he said.

The next day he dragged himself to his parents' house in Highland Park toting a Gatorade in one hand and a bag of McDonald's food in the other. He was bummed about his subpar food-scarfing performance and could eat very little of the feast that Thanksgiving.

"I'm just much more cautious. I don't go crazy like I used to," said Pinzur, now 31, who lives in Lincoln Park.

Now he paces himself and sticks to vodka sodas because the soda water keeps him hydrated, which he swears by for less of a chance of having a hangover. He takes wa-

SOUTH LOOP SIPPING

Jimmy Green's Bar & Grill

825 S. State St. 312-386-9000

7-11:30 p.m. No cover

This 8-month-old sports bar kept party details so quiet that even bartenders didn't get the skinny prior to the bash. The secret? The bar debuts a house brew—Jimmy Green's South Loop lager—made by local custom beer maker Argus Brewery. Jimmy's is an official Bulls and Blackhawks bar, meaning you can watch both games while you sip.

MAKE A PILGRIMAGE

Rockit Bar & Grill

22 W. Hubbard St. 312-645-6000 | 7-11 p.m. $10

Mayflower madness descends on four River North bars during the third annual Metromix/RedEye Black Wednesday Pilgrimage. The crawl starts at Rockit and moves on to Dos Diablos, O'Callaghan's and Blue Frog 22 and includes pilgrim-style T-shirts, turkey legs and drink deals at each stop.

to have a huge meal and then you're stuffed and don't want to drink. A solid base is always good," he said. And stay hydrated. "A nice big glass of water before you go to bed will always help with the hangover in the morning," he said.

But if bargoers end up with a massive hangover, Bill Carlson swears by pounding an energy drink in the morning.

"It gets rid of the drowsiness. You might still have a headache, but at least you're energetic and functioning at Thanksgiving rather than sleeping on the couch," said Carlson, 23.

Among his other tips: popping a couple of Advil and hitting up a fast-food joint for some greasy grub. Carlson plans on stopping by bars in Lincoln Park or downtown when on break from grad school at the University of Illinois and back home in La Grange.

"That Wednesday is one of those nights where you drink a little bit of everything. Usually it's inevitable that you're hung over on Thanksgiving," he said. "You can try and say no shots, but it doesn't usually turn out that way," he said. He stays away from mixing too much and drinking any sugary cocktail concoction.

After his horrible Thanksgiving eve experience in 2004, Pinzur said he doesn't want anything to get in the way of enjoying his favorite holiday.

"It's just hanging out with your family. It's fun. There's football games going on, good food," he said. "It's a definition of gluttony where you sit down and do nothing all day."

BAR-GUMENTS

SETTLING AGE-OLD, BAR-BASED DISAGREEMENTS ONE ARGUMENT AT A TIME

What is a bar-gument, you say? For as long as there have been watering holes, there have been disagreements. Some people prefer martinis with gin, some with vodka. Bar-guments is here to settle some longstanding bar conflicts once and for all.

This week: Are glass or aluminum bottles better for brew?

VS

GLASS BOTTLES

Beer in an aluminum container has a place in this world. It's called a can. Perfect for summer barbecues, pool parties, drinking while in motion (i.e. kickball, bowling, etc.) and crushing against your forehead to impress girls. Past that, it's just ridiculous. Why would anyone want to drink out of something that looks like Axe body spray and makes the beer taste like metal? Nope. If you're going to drink out of a bottle, stick with glass and make your bar swords the old-fashioned way. —MIKE RICH

ALUMINUM BOTTLES

I love our planet almost as much as I love beer, which is why I opt for aluminum anytime I have a choice. Pour the suds into a glass and it tastes the same—or even better if it comes from aluminum, which protects the beer from light that can mess with beer's flavor. Factor in that aluminum is easier to recycle and lighter to haul, and it's clearly the green choice for beer lovers. Why don't we celebrate this fact over a frosty brew out of an aluminum bottle? —MIKE HINES

“Welcome to the Breakdown”

Former Metromix Rock 'n' Vote winners hit the big time with chiptune-powered pop

If Fred Savage's video game-obsessed character in the 1989 film “The Wizard” had grown up and started a band, it might sound something like Chicago's I Fight Dragons.

Blending power pop and chiptune—a genre of beats created using vintage video game sound cards—the 2-year-old crew crafts melodic tunes that sound something like Fall Out Boy rocking out in King Koopa's realm. Reached by phone at his home in Evanston before the group's release show at Metro for new EP “Welcome to the Breakdown,” 26-year-old founder and Glenview native Brian Mazzaferri discussed his early obsession with video games, how signing to a major label has altered his control-freak tendencies (the band inked with Atlantic/Photo Finish in February) and what it meant to win Metromix's local band contest Rock 'n' Vote in 2009.

It's been about a year and a half since you won Metromix Rock 'n' Vote. Are you going to remember us when you give that first Grammy speech?

[Laughs.] Definitely. “And to the Rock 'n' Vote voters, this is what your text message bought you.” It's funny to say that, but that was a really big milestone for us in our first year together as a band. When people were trying to start our Wikipedia page in 2009 and other people were trying to stop them, that was one of the rallying cries. Should these people even have a Wikipedia page? One of the big arguments by the people that said we should was that we had won this contest.

Did you grow up playing video games?

Yes. When I was a baby, my dad sat me in front of the Atari and just left me to play with it. But I was a kid and I didn't understand what I was supposed to do, so I ended up chewing on the controller. He took it away for a year or two until I could understand what was going on.

Was there a particular game soundtrack that inspired this musical direction?

Before I Fight Dragons, I was more of an acoustic singer-songwriter. I was working on some songs, and kind of on a whim I was like, “What if the intro sounded like it was a Nintendo version of the song?” [Bandmate] Bill [Prokopow] and I went and played a bunch of “Super Mario Brothers 3,” listened to the actual sounds being made and mocked it up. Then I did some research and discovered there was this whole scene with people specifically making chiptune.

Did you ever have any concerns about copyright infringement?

Well, even from the beginning we were very conscious [about copyright

New band you don't know personally that deserves to be big? Jukebox the Ghost.
"I've been to a couple shows and they're just great."

infringement]. We don't use samples. There are no melodies taken from pre-existing works. All of the chiptune we do is composed by us. The main tool we use these days is my original Game Boy. There's a program called Little Sound DJ that basically lets you use your Game Boy as sequencer and synthesizer. That's how I program most of our chiptune.

You mentioned being a bit of a control freak. With the label assisting with things like the band's e-mail list, which you used to manage, have you had to find other outlets for those tendencies?

It was always really tough maintaining a balance between making music and handling the business part. During that first year especially, the business part often won. I'm still involved on that end, but I'm not spending all my time on it. On the other hand, we need tons and tons of new songs. And not only new songs, but the best songs we've ever written. I've written over 50 songs for the album. That's where the control-freak thing has come out.

Where are you in terms of the full-length album?

Really close in terms of writing. We're 95 percent of the way there with the songs. Hopefully we'll be recording right after the holidays. Optimistically, we'd like to have it out in the spring, but probably no later than summer.

Give me the plot synopsis for "I Fight Dragons: The Video Game."

[Laughs.] Yes! I suppose it would be [five] early cyborgs that were deposited on Earth and implanted with human back stories in order to conquer the evil, anti-art masses of the larger music industry and to release their shining power pop on the world.

My Chemical Romance

"Danger Days: The True Lives of the Fabulous Killjoys"

Reprise/Sire
On 2006's "The Black Parade,"

the New Jersey quartet reinvented itself as a screamo Queen, cramming everything from marching bands to a guest spot from Liza Minnelli(!) into its widescreen anthems for the broken, the beaten and the damned. This time around, frontman Gerard Way and Co. spend a bulk of their time stripping the music down to its dirty, raw essentials.

Glam-metal cuts like "Bulletproof Heart," "Vampire Money" and the awesomely titled "Na Na Na (Na Na Na Na Na Na Na Na Na)" layer on slash-and-burn guitars, thundering drums and Way's bratty vocals. "I'd rather go to hell than be in purgatory," he sneers on the latter. "Let this world explode!" The singer, who recently dyed his hair fire-engine red to match the outlandish persona he channels on record, remains magnetic throughout. Whether questioning his own fragile grasp on humanity ("Summertime") or lashing out at the rock-star lifestyle ("Keep your cars and your drugs and your famous friends," he howls on the rumbling "Party Poison"), the eerily charismatic frontman makes it impossible to turn away.

Mitchell Fain talks Sedaris' 'Santaland Diaries,' sweaty tights and the holidays

By Julia Borcherts

Portraying a department store Christmas elf in the thick of the holiday season may seem like a bit of a departure for an actor with roots in Shakespeare productions, but it's not unfamiliar territory for Mitchell Fain. Boldly going where others may fear to tread, Fain, 44, also has portrayed a dying Dalmatian, three dead gay poets, a petulant dictator and a killer cheerleader. The Rhode Island native danced naked onstage at the Dance Chicago festival and most recently performed with The Second City Touring Company on a cruise ship. At age 30, he learned acrobatics to become an ensemble member with The Midnight Circus, and these days Fain co-hosts the Windy City Queercast in his spare time.

Now Fain dons a pair of striped tights to star in Theater Wit's "The Santaland Diaries," David Sedaris' humorous solo show about failed attempts to maintain dignity while working as a department store Christmas elf named Crumpet. We called Fain during rehearsals to catch up.

How does playing Crumpet affect your view of the holidays?

I was raised Jewish [laughs] in a very Catholic town, so I got to enjoy Christmas from the outside. I'm actually very un-cynical about the season because no one expects me to be anywhere. Like a good Jew, I go to a Chinese restaurant and I go see a movie in the afternoon. And if there's a Barbra Streisand movie opening, that's like double-Christmas.

[Performing in "Santaland"] gives me a purpose during the holidays. It can be a cynical show, but there's nothing better than making people laugh.

Where do you buy Crumpet's tights?

The costume designer orders them online from, like, Tights 'R Us. [Laughs.] That's not what it's called, but it's something like that where they specialize in wacky tights. I always have to have four or five pair because a. it's a little sweaty, and b. I tend to put runs in them, because you know, being a boy, I haven't learned how to put them on gracefully. [Laughs.]

What's the worst real-life job you've ever had?

I always joke that I'm the only actor I know who's never waited tables. I've actually been really lucky with the side jobs. But when I first moved to Chicago, I got a job doing telemarketing. They train me for about half an hour, I take two calls and then I say to the manager, "Hey, listen, I'm just going to grab a quick cigarette and come back in." And I never came back. [Laughs.]

You've been able to give up the side jobs. What makes Chicago such a good place for actors?

In other cities, like New York, it's so expensive that you're working a million hours a week just to pay for your apartment, and it's hard to have the space and freedom to explore and take classes. In Chicago, it's easier to live as an artist. People in Chicago go to see local theater and dance and music. It feels like a community here.

What's up next for you?

I close "Santaland" on New Year's Eve, and then the next morning, I fly to Kentucky to do a "Best of Second City" show at the Actors Theater of Louisville for a month. The director is the guru, the master here in Chicago: Mick Napier from The Annoyance Theater. I'm really, really excited about it.

Christina Aguilera hopes 'Burlesque' jaunt boosts sagging career after rough year

Los Angeles Times

A few paparazzi were loitering on the hot concrete outside Chelsea Handler's talk show studio in West L.A. last week, waiting for Christina Aguilera to emerge so they could take her picture. But they weren't sure their idling would pay off.

"Her walking with a coffee cup is basically worth nothing," said Bobby Rachpoot, a photographer for Bauer Griffin. "Unless she is with a new boyfriend. That would be like $100,000."

In the wake of a tough year, it seems Aguilera's stock has plummeted. More than a decade ago, she became one of the biggest names in pop music and since has sold more than 16 million albums in the U.S. and won five Grammy awards. But the 29-year-old's fourth English-language studio album, "Bionic," debuted in June to mixed reviews. And last month, Aguilera filed for divorce from her husband of five years, music producer Jordan Bratman, with whom she has a 2-year-old son.

Now, though, Hollywood is giving Aguilera a chance to be the comeback kid. She makes her acting debut in "Burlesque," opening Wednesday. If the PG-13 musical in which she stars opposite Oscar winner Cher hits big, it could catapult her the way "The Bodyguard" did Whitney Houston. But if it flops, a la Mariah Carey's disastrous 2001 turn in "Glitter," it may further tarnish her once-flourishing career.

In the film, Aguilera plays Ali, a wide-eyed Midwest transplant with Hollywood dreams. When she arrives in L.A., she stumbles upon a Sunset Strip burlesque club, where she is taken in by owner Tess (Cher) and becomes the star of a song-and-dance show. The movie is a custom-built showcase for the singer, with a handful of flashy musical numbers that play to her strengths—wailing atop a stage while executing taxing choreography. Even her look in the film—bustiers, fake eyelashes and glittery eye shadow—mimics the costumes she sometimes dons in concert.

If Aguilera is worried about being taken seriously as an actress—or about any of the troubles in her life—she hides it well. The singer, who has been in the spotlight since she was cast on "The New Mickey Mouse Club" at age 12, knows how to present a calm countenance in the eye of a storm.

"With the transitions that are happening in my life, I just can't wait to look forward to the future—as an actress, as a mom, as a woman who has experienced so much at this point in her life," she said.

Aguilera puts on a good show, says Steven Antin, the writer-director of "Burlesque."

"She's guarded and hard to get to know at first. Not unfriendly, just guarded," he said. "She's been doing this for a long time, so you need to earn it with her."

Before Antin's script came her way, Aguilera had been only casually pursuing the idea of taking on a film role.

"It was nothing that I was every night passionately reading scripts and going through them and sweating about it," she said. "I would read them and usually just nothing sparked my attention enough."

Aguilera admitted to doubts about the career move. She was anxious about starring with the larger-than-life Cher, of course, but also worried about the basics of film: Should she hire an acting coach? Was it best to look directly into the camera while performing musical numbers?

"In approaching it, I was like, 'How do I do this? Do I memorize the whole thing at once? How is this possible? How do people do this all the time?'" she said, laughing at herself.

Pop stars don't have the best track records on the silver screen. Most famously, there was Carey's bomb "Glitter," followed by another ill-advised turn in "Tennessee." Britney Spears had her acting debut (and swan song) with the forgettable 2002 road trip movie "Crossroads."

"You've heard a lot of horror stories," Aguilera acknowledged. "And a lot of people don't make successful crossovers. That's why I think I also just really took my time in choosing the right thing and not just saying, 'Hey, let me try this just to do it and say I did it.' If you don't, I think the work would suffer and then you'd get written off as just another one trying to do something they can't do."

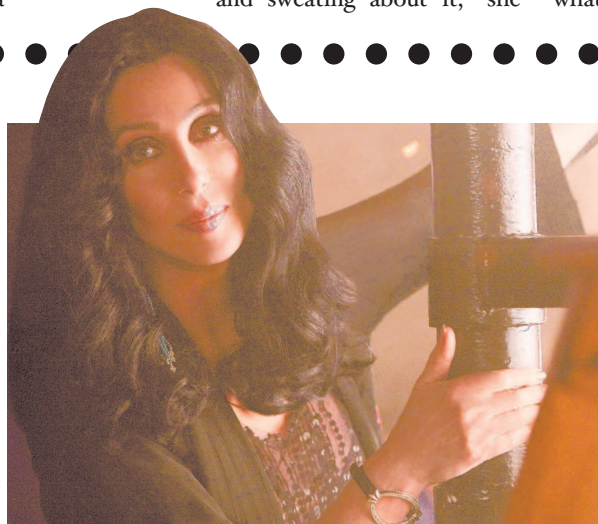

As for future film plans, she said "Burlesque" gave her the acting bug but admits she struggles reading scripts.

"My attention span is very short for getting through them," she said with a sigh, "so I do what I can."

BUT CAN THEY ACT?

"Burlesque," opening Wednesday with the dynamic duo of Cher and Christina Aguilera, enters a hallowed tradition: the making of the pop idol into the movie star. OK, "star" isn't always the case, but Aguilera should take comfort from history: It isn't all that bleak. Here are a few who have come before her. NEWSDAY

THE GOOD

Cher

There were many singers-to-actors before her, but let's start with Cher (left), who got an Oscar nomination for her first substantial film role ("Silkwood") and was chosen as best actress three years later for "Moonstruck" (1987). Bang bang, she shot her critics down. SCREEN GEMS PHOTO

Rappers

The most successful pop-screen transitions have been by people now so successful on screen that the public has almost forgotten they were musicians to begin with—Will Smith, say, or Queen Latifah. Mark Wahlberg has done well for himself (in "The Departed," if not "The Happening"). Erstwhile rapper Ice-T, who now spends his time huffing and puffing around "Law & Order: SVU," delivered a startling series of performances in the early '90s ("New Jack City," "Ricochet," "Trespass") and immediately went from "rapper-actor" to "actor." LL Cool J. Mos Def. The hip-hop scene has been a fertile one for Hollywood.

FAST PAISED 'Burlesque'

■ ■ ■ ■ ■ Fresh off the bus from Iowa to L.A., Ali (Christina Aguilera) boasts a great body and an even better voice, so it's only a matter of time until the head honchos at the Burlesque Lounge (Cher, Peter Gallagher, Stanley Tucci) give her a chance. (No idea why Ali doesn't want a career as a professional singer.) Meanwhile, a real estate mogul (Eric Dane) tries to buy the club and Ali rooms with one of the club's bartenders, Jack (Cam Gigandet), whose fiancée is 3,000 miles away and not coming back soon.

The verdict: Far too chatty, not enough catty. There aren't any strong personalities and not nearly enough dancing in "Burlesque," which underuses dancing pro Julianne Hough and wastes a lot of time with a diva played by Kristen Bell. What flashes of dance there are—sparsely sprinkled around a fourth-hand, exhaustingly obvious plot—get pushed to the side once the stage gives way to Ali's voice, which possesses absolutely no evidence of a mostly parentless childhood or, uh, a life spent being beautiful and talented. Only Tucci's better than OK; most of the performances are much worse, particularly a very out-of-practice Cher, whose big performance number features her sitting for a while and then standing up. "Black Swan" is the movie to see for people who want breathtaking dancing. The not-at-all-fun "Burlesque" is the one for people who wish Christina Aguilera music videos took more story advice from "Coyote Ugly."

Justin Timberlake

He may have stunk up the place in "Alpha Dog," but the 'N Syncer is terrific as Napster founder Sean Parker in "The Social Network." He's also delivered laughs galore on "Saturday Night Live" (left) and has several more film projects lined up. NBC PHOTO

Madonna

Despite her rampaging success almost everywhere else, Madonna has remained the movies' Immaterial Girl. The bad: "Body of Evidence," "Shanghai Surprise," "Swept Away." The good: "Who's That Girl" "Dick Tracy," (left) "A League of Their Own." In between: "Evita"

Mariah Carey

Pop starlets

They really need no further explanation: Britney Spears in "Crossroads," Kelly Clarkson in "From Justin to Kelly," all the Spice Girls in "Spice World," Jennifer Lopez in "Enough."

It's payback time for a seemingly invincible man known only as Driver (Dwayne Johnson) when he gets out of jail and immediately begins murdering the men responsible for killing his brother. On Driver's tail: a sleazy cop (Billy Bob Thornton), a respectable one (Carla Gugino) and a self-indulgent pretty boy (Oliver Jackson-Cohen) who's also an assassin-for-hire.

The buzz: Johnson may not go by "The Rock" anymore, but he's still built like Stonehenge and has learned the difference between looking angry and looking focused. It sure would be nice if director George Tillman Jr. ("Notorious") could deliver an action movie that's not just gloomy and ultra-violent like last year's Thanksgiving week revenge flick, "Ninja Assassin."

The verdict: Packed with unexpected stillness and a number of tough, adrenaline-boosting action sequences, "Faster" is cool and crisp where movies like "Salt" are just loud and dumb.

Johnson in 'Faster'
CBS FILMS

Yes, "Faster" lets Driver off a moral hook when he targets only hardened crooks, but the film, thankfully, is neither gratuitously violent nor out to find gleeful fun in murder. Contrived or not, the criminals demonstrate a certain honor among thieves; when Driver comes calling, it's not reckless blood lust, just deadly karma coming back around.

Charming cad Jamie (Jake Gyllenhaal) happily expands his options for one-night stands when he becomes a Pfizer rep in late '90s Ohio -- especially once he hears about a new drug on the way called Viagra. Perhaps Jamie will calm his womanizing ways for Maggie (Anne Hathaway), a defensive pill trying to come to terms with her diagnosis of early onset Parkinson's Disease.

The verdict: If there's one thing the world doesn't need, it's more Viagra jokes—or sexist depictions of professional women throwing away ethics in hopes of landing a man, whether for a night or longer.

DISNEY

Things get hairy for 'Tangled' voice stars

Reuters

Disney Animation is famous for creating iconic royalty out of the characters in old fairy tales, but that didn't prevent Mandy Moore and Zachary Levi from taking roles in "Tangled."

The film, which opens Wednesday, reimagines the Brothers Grimm tale of the girl with the long golden hair who is locked away in a forest tower before a prince comes along and tries to spring her loose. Rapunzel (Moore) steps out of the tower to embark on her adventure with a handsome thief named Flynn Ryder (Zachary Levi).

Moore and Levi talk about "Tangled," their favorite childhood Disney movies and, of course, Rapunzel's long, long hair.

Mandy, did you feel pressure originating a Disney character that would stand alongside Snow White, Cinderella and Sleeping Beauty?

MM: To be the voice of a Disney princess in general, let alone for the 50th animated film, is an undertaking. [But] I didn't feel too much pressure. I was excited to be the voice of Rapunzel and part of the rigmarole that comes with it.

Can you imagine if this was a live-action film and your hair was actually that long?

MM: [Laughs.] I would probably have perpetual neck pain! Seventy feet of hair has got to be quite heavy! But she uses it to her advantage most of the time.

ZL: Wow, I've never even thought about the weight. The sheer neck muscle ...

MM: She's got to have some core strength to drag all of that hair ...

ZL: Pilates, hello!

Mandy, you do all of your singing in the film, which is natural considering you've recorded six studio albums. Zach, you're known for your TV series "Chuck." Can you sing?

ZL: Mandy and I do a duet together. ["I See the Light."]

MM: Um, hello? The world needs to know that is Zach singing in the film. He is a ridiculously amazing singer!

Will Rapunzel be Disney's last princess?

Los Angeles Times

The curtain is falling on "princess movies," which have been a part of Disney Animation's heritage since the 1937 debut of its first feature film, "Snow White." The studio's release of "Tangled" will be the last fairy tale produced by Disney's animation group for the foreseeable future.

"Films and genres do run a course," said

Pixar Animation Studios chief Ed Catmull, who along with director John Lasseter oversees Disney Animation. "They may come back later because someone has a fresh take on it ... but we don't have any other musicals or fairy tales lined up."

Catmull and Lasseter killed two other fairy tale movies that had been in development, "The Snow Queen" and "Jack and the Beanstalk."

Lower Back Pain?

Are You or Someone You Know Suffering From Lower Back Pain?

Northwestern University is seeking volunteers who have lower back pain in order to determine where the pain is recognized in the brain. Participants will also be evaluated to determine why pain goes away for some people while it remains for others. This is a 12 month study consisting of 1 visit at the Rehabilitation Institute of Chicago and 5 MRI scans at Northwestern Memorial Hospital's Olson Pavilion. All visits will take place in downtown Chicago.

- Eligible participants must:
- Be 18 years or older
  - Have a history of lower back pain which began 4-16 weeks ago with pain radiating into the buttocks or legs
  - Be able to undergo a MRI (no pacemakers, metallic implants, or spinal implants)

Please call 312-503-3181 for more information on how you can take part in this research study.

Sweet wine flavors to tempt beginners

bottle
service

ALPANA SINGH
ritaredeye
@tribune.com

It's that time of year, when we surround ourselves with family and friends to raise a glass and give thanks. For some, the beverage flavor of choice might not be wine.

My first taste of wine definitely was not a pleasurable experience. The label on the back of the wine bottle in my parents' refrigerator promised notes of apple, peaches and honey, yet the flavors I tasted were a symphony of bitter, sour and dry. Blech!

The restaurant where I worked at the time required all servers to attend extensive wine training courses. I sat there in bewilderment as my colleagues tasted wine and were able to call out flavors of everything from blueberries to chocolate and bananas. All I got in my nose was the burn from the alcohol.

Not wanting to give up, I persisted and one day while tasting a glass of California chardonnay, I picked up clear as a crystal bell the flavors of canned Bartlett pears. My ability to hone in on different smells in wine did not come immediately, and it took the better part of a year of swirling and sniffing before I got the hang of it.

In my early days of wine appreciation I favored fruit-forward selections such as red zinfandel, sweet riesling, New Zealand sauvignon blanc and Australian shiraz. I found the vibrant flavors in these wines were more pleasing to my palate. I have come to appreciate wines with less fruit and more acidity and structure, but the riper selections paved the road for me to get to this point.

Here are four of my suggestions for wine beginners.

REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR ALPANA SINGH IS DIRECTOR OF WINE AND SPIRITS FOR LETTUCE ENTERTAIN YOU ENTERPRISES AND THE HOST OF "CHECK, PLEASE!" ON WTTW. ALPANASINGH.COM

Start with these wines

Apothic Red

California, $13

This blend of zinfandel, merlot and syrah is on the riper end of the spectrum with a slight hint of sweetness on the finish. If you find traditional red wines such as cabernet sauvignon or even malbec too dry, give this a try.

Kung Fu Girl riesling

Washington state, $12

The sweet and tart green apple flavors will appeal to those who find drier selections such as chardonnay too bitter or sour.

Matua sauvignon blanc

New Zealand, $12

The grapefruit and passion fruit flavors offer the right amount of fruitiness without being too sweet or cloying.

Marquis Phillips Roogle shiraz

Australia, $11

When I started drinking wine, shiraz was my go-to grape because I could identify and enjoy the flavors of blackberry jam, blueberry pie filling and robust spiciness.

WAKE UP!

- Are you walking around like the living dead after wrestling with your CPAP all night?
- Do you fall asleep in your lunch at your desk?
- Does your CPAP feel as if you are being smothered by an octopus?

Put the hoses, mask and straps away and get into Oral Appliance Therapy to treat your Sleep Apnea and snoring! Midwest Dental Sleep Center is your solution to sound, healthy, sleep. With the oral appliance you will no longer be restricted by the hose from your machine; free to sleep how and where you wish! Our patients are surprised by how comfortable the oral appliance is to wear. Patients love how simple it is to maintain and appreciate its discreetness. Another feature patients like is its portability. Ever brought a CPAP to the airport?!

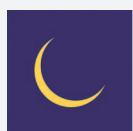

Oral appliance therapy is completely noninvasive and is covered by medical insurance. The oral appliance is a small clear plastic retainer custom fit to the upper and lower teeth. It gently brings the lower jaw forward, opening the airway, allowing you to breathe and sleep soundly! As easy to wear as a sports mouth guard, you can talk, drink water, open and close your mouth and sleep in the position you prefer. Not to mention it makes airport security lines a breeze! You can even bring your appliance camping – no outlet required.

Is oral appliance therapy right for you? If you suffer from mild to moderate sleep apnea or are severe and are not wearing your CPAP as directed, then an oral appliance may be the alternative treatment you've been seeking. Wake up to a new treatment and a new you – the well rested, refreshed, less anxious you! Just imagine, the power of sleep in the palm of your hand.

Our Doctors understand the seriousness of oral appliance therapy and are able to ensure you get the right appliance for your needs and that you're able to properly utilize the oral appliance. We have successfully treated thousands of patients, and our staff's knowledge and experience really shows. We have teams focused on getting your therapy covered in network through insurance, and to take each of your calls with care. Your oral appliance program takes place in our quiet, relaxed office where your comfort is paramount. Our modern atmosphere is far from the feel of traditional dental facilities. We're your friendly dental sleep solution!

With three locations, Midwest Dental Sleep Centers are Illinois' only stand alone practices dedicated to treating patients with snoring and sleep apnea. Our Dentists are trained by General Dentist Dr. Richard Craig, D.D.S. a diplomat of the American Board of Dental Sleep Medicine and founder of Midwest Dental Sleep Center.

Yes, "Sesame Street" already has a float in the parade, but this year's greatest pop culture collabo/catastrophe deserves to be waaaaay up in the air where all the kids (and their parents) can see them. PBS, GETTY IMAGES PHOTO

Harry Potter

He won't be insanely culturally relevant for much longer, so let's get everyone's favorite wizard up there on a broomstick. This would be made even more awesome by a tiny Golden Snitch balloon for the Harry balloon to catch, a la Quidditch. WARNER BROS. PICTURES PHOTO

Extra points if they just use a real house and a ton of helium balloons. We're sure this is nearly mathematically impossible, so we'd settle for one of Dug the talking dog. PIXAR PHOTO

And for the parade's grand marshal ...

Kanye West. He was seen Tuesday by MTV rehearsing for his performance in the parade, but Yeezy's year has been so big, he should be twirling a baton and wearing a ridiculous hat at the front of the whole thing. GETTY IMAGES FILE PHOTO

Tradition is fine, but we've got some ideas for new Thanksgiving parade balloons

By Dana Moran | REDEYE

No matter if you get up early to watch or just DVR it and break out a lawn chair, the Macy's Thanksgiving Day Parade in New York takes the cake—er, pie—with 50 million people tuning in. Here are a few giant balloons we'd add to this year's lineup.

Al Piemonte Ford offers travel incentive.

To make it more affordable for shoppers to meet face to face with Al Piemonte Ford's credit department, the dealership has added a gift card incentive. Now customers who visit the Credit Department will be rewarded with a $10 Target Gift Card.

Finance personnel will be on hand to meet with them and access their ability to get financing for a new or used vehicle. Ed Dixon, "The Credit Coach" from the dealership, sees this as another step in making the customer experience "friendly and inviting".

"We recognize that sometimes people travel a considerable distance to come to our dealership and we want to reward them for their effort!"

Shoppers can start the process by calling a 24 hour toll free number dedicated to financing. The number is 1-800-NEXT CREDIT or 1-800-639-8273.

$15.95 OIL CHANGE OFFERED

Al Piemonte Ford has once again rocked Chicago by breaking the price barrier with a $15.95 oil change. The specially priced oil change is available between the hours of 7pm and 9pm from Monday through Friday. It's part of the celebration of their newly extended service hours. "We hope this $15.95 oil change shows people that Al Piemonte Ford is the best place to service their car, regardless of what they drive," explained Service Manager Chuck Murphy.

The dealership services all makes and models at its' Quick Lane, located on the southwest side of the dealership. Al Piemonte Ford is at 25th and North Avenue in Melrose Park. Appointments are recommended due to the extremely discounted price. Call 708-345-9300.

HOT DATES

9 & 10

That's when Taylor Swift will land her whirling dervish of pop-country in Chicago for her "Speak Now" tour, her website revealed Tuesday.

'Street' campaign

Live from New York, it's ... Cookie Monster? We'll see. The producers of "Sesame Street" have released an unofficial audition tape and created a Facebook site in an effort to get the furry blue guy on "Saturday Night Live," according to thr.com. In the tape, Cookie Monster hosts his own "Weekend Update" segment and does an impression of Lady Gaga. You gotta give him credit—or a cookie—for ambition.

Of course she did. While painting over gang graffiti in L.A. as part of her community service stemming from misdemeanor charges in August, socialite Paris Hilton was spotted wearing red sunglasses and Christian Louboutin heels, according to usmagazine.com. As they say, it's better to look good than to behave good. Or something.

THAT'S HOT

It's Grey's day

Nothing, not a ruptured disc in her back, not even the Palin family name, puts Baby in a corner. "Dirty Dancing" star Jennifer Grey claimed the "Dancing With the Stars" Season 11 crown Tuesday and held off the juggernaut, voter-backed campaign of Bristol Palin. She and Disney Channel star Kyle Massey were cheerful runners-up.

Kanye for kids

Have you ever wondered what Kanye West's tweets would sound like if acted out by toddlers? Apparently, the folks at babelgum.com did. Adorable cherubs act out such prolific Ye observations as: "[This] hotel bathrobe got me feeling like a king." It's too cute, really. In other Ye-related news, frequent collaborator Dwele ("Power," "Flashing Lights") will appear Saturday at The Shrine.

"I always said it had to be someone who wasn't better looking than me and they achieved it."
